Assessing two years of Bunge data 2010-2012

1. Introduction

The ninth session of the Bunge (Parliament) was adjourned on 9 November 2012, two years since the commencement of the first session on 9 November 2010 following the general election. These Bunge sessions have been broadcast through private and public TV stations allowing citizens to follow their representatives' actions. Another source of information regarding MP performance is provided by the Parliamentary On-line Information System (POLIS) posted on the Tanzania Parliament website (www.bunge.go.tz)

An important question for any citizen is: how did my MP represent my interests in Parliament? One way to assess performance of MPs is to look at the number of interventions they make in Bunge. MPs can make three types of interventions: they can ask basic questions submitted in advance; they can add supplementary questions after basic questions have been answered by the government; or they can make contributions during the budget sessions, law amendments or discussions on new laws.

This brief presents six facts on the performance of MPs, from November 2010 to November 2012, updating similar analyses conducted by Twaweza in previous years. It includes an assessment of who were the least and most active MPs. It also raises questions on the significance of education level when it comes to effectiveness of participation by MPs in parliament. The dataset can be downloaded from www.twaweza.org/go/bunge2010-2012

The Bunge dataset includes observations on 351 members: MPs who were elected and served (233), MPs in Special Seats (102), Presidential Appointees (10) and those from the Zanzibar House of Representatives (5) and the Attorney General. For this brief, we exclude seven members from the analysis: the parliamentary officials (Speaker, Deputy Speaker, and three Parliamentary Chairmen), the Second Vice President of Zanzibar and the Attorney General who make many interventions by virtue of their positions. In this brief we therefore use data for 344 MPs. All data refer to the period 9 November 2010 to 9 November 2012.

2. Six facts about MP participation in Bunge

Fact 1: CCM MPs made the most interventions

A total of 14,572 interventions were made, with an average of 42 per MP. CCM led with 9,890 contributions, followed by Chadema with 2,751, CUF with 1,435, NCCR-MAGEUZI with 372, TLP with 87 and UDP with 37. That CCM accounts for most contributions is to be expected, since 254 MPs are from CCM as compared to 48 MPs from Chadema, 35 MPs from CUF, 5 MPs from NCCR-MAGEUZI, and 1 MP each from TLP and UDP. Based on these numbers, Figure 1 presents the share of interventions and MPs, respectively, by party.

Source of Data: Parliament of Tanzania Website (www.bunge.go.tz)

Fact 2: CCM MPs were least active

The average number of interventions per MP by party is shown in Table 1 below. For all three types of interventions, it is the parties with the lowest number of MPs who are the most active on average.

- Basic questions: TLP (1 MP) ranks first with an average of 13 per MP
- Supplementary questions: NCCR-MAGEUZI (5 MPs) ranks first with an average of 17 per MP
- Contributions: TLP (1 MP) ranks first with an average of 60 per MP

The ruling party, CCM, ranks last in average number of supplementary questions. UDP, CUF and CCM rank last in making contributions. UDP did not ask a single basic question.

When looking at total interventions, TLP continues to perform well, ranking first but NCCR-MAGEUZI follows closely behind with an average of 74 interventions per MP. UDP and CCM are less active at 37 and 39 interventions per MP respectively. However, excluding the small parties with less than 5 percent representation in Bunge, Chadema is the most active, followed by CUF and CCM.

Table1: Average number of intervention per MP, by Party

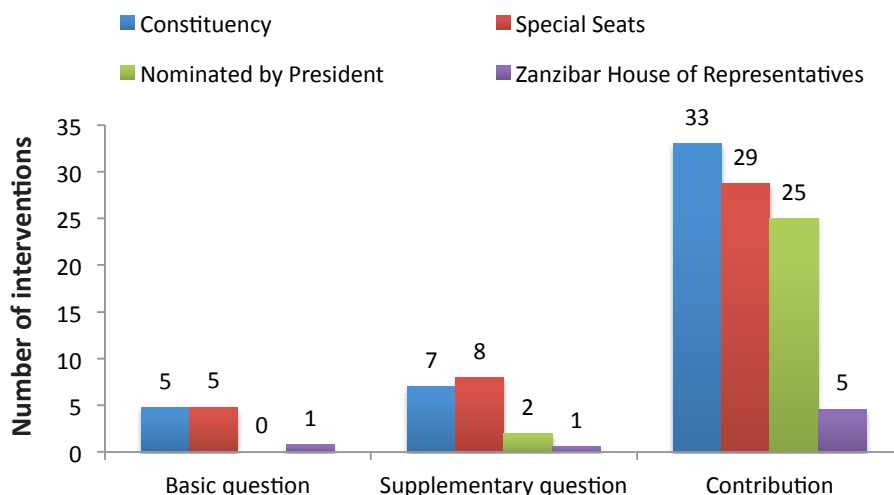

| Party | Number of MPs | Total Interventions (per MP) | Basic Questions (per MP) | Supplementary Questions (per MP) | Contributions (per MP) |
|----------------------|---------------|------------------------------|--------------------------|----------------------------------|------------------------|
| Large Parties | | | | | |
| Chadema | 48 | 57 | 6 | 11 | 40 |
| CUF | 35 | 41 | 5 | 8 | 28 |

Fact 3: Elected MPs are more active than nominated MPs

As shown in Figure 2 below, elected members were the most active in terms of contributions, with 33 contributions per MP, while Special Seats MPs were slightly more active in terms of basic questions and supplementary questions (with five and seven questions per MP in the two categories, respectively). MPs from the Zanzibar House of Representatives and those nominated by the President were the least active during parliamentary sessions.

Fact 4: MPs with higher education levels are more active

Information on education levels for 311 MPs (89 percent of the total) was made available in the Parliamentary On-line Information System (POLIS). Among these MPs, those with primary education were less active on average than those with post-secondary and higher levels of education (Figure 3). However, MPs with postgraduate degrees and doctorates made fewer interventions than their counterparts with single degrees.

Fact 5: Hon. George Boniface Simbachawene was the most active MP

To identify the overall performance of MPs, the three types of interventions were aggregated to create a total performance score. Aggregation was done by adding up the number of times an MP asked a basic or supplementary question or made a contribution. Using this approach Hon. George Simbachawene of CCM is ranked as the most active MP in the period studied, with a total of 273 interventions: 7 basic questions, 16 supplementary questions and 250 contributions.

Hon. John Mnyika, Hon. Tundu Lissu and Hon. Zitto Kabwe, also of Chadema, made the list of the top five most active MPs. Hon. Diana Chilolo of CCM was also among the top five most active MPs.

Fact 6: Hon. Mohammed Said Mohammed was the least active MP

Using the same approach, Hon. Mohamed Said Mohamed of CCM was found to be the least active MP out of all ‘ordinary’ MPs. He is the only MP in Parliament who reportedly did not make a single intervention in the two years covered by this brief, according to the POLIS records. The other members who were least active were also from CCM, as shown in Table 3 below.

3. Conclusion

The information in this brief was retrieved from the publicly accessible Parliamentary On-line Information System (POLIS) and has been used to assess the level of participation by Members of Parliament in the first nine sessions (two years) of the Eighth Parliament of the United Republic of Tanzania.

The most active MPs tended to come from the opposition, and the least active were from the ruling CCM party. Perhaps this is no surprise, since one of the roles of Parliament is to hold the executive in check. Another factor at play here is that, for any given national level agenda item to be discussed in Bunge, large parties have more candidates to take the word and so the average number of interventions per large party MP will be lower. However, for policy questions at the constituency level this is not the case. This raises questions about the effectiveness of representation of constituency interests in Parliament.

The method used in this assessment, number of interventions in Bunge, is only one indicator of MP performance. Follow-up to questions or issues is not considered, nor roles that MPs can play serving in parliamentary committees. Perhaps a more valued role may be how MPs engage with citizens in their constituencies, influencing 'projects' and funds to be channeled in their areas and taking actions to solve problems. As of yet we do not know of an effective way to measure such performance, but we welcome your ideas.

This brief also assesses active participation by education levels. It may be useful to study other relationships, such as wealth levels. If the Ethics Secretariat were to release the wealth declarations of MPs, consistent with the principles of the Open Government Partnership, such analyses would be possible.
